Speaker of Hope

My name is Kim Case and, like many of you, my life has been littered with more than a fair share of losses, hurts, and low points. At 19 I survived a brutal kidnapping and rape by four strangers. I spent my childhood in a family where money was scarce, addictions were prevalent and violence had a tight grip on my home. I know this all sounds terrible, but if you're reading this now you can see that I've found healing and so can you.

As a crime survivor, system advisor and advocate for victims, I've spent two decades breaking barriers and creating change in the public safety sector. Through my journey as an advocate, speaker, and consultant, I've been able to develop and direct programs within the Department of Justice, Office for Victims of Crime (OVC), the created programming for the National Center for Campus Public Safety, the United States Air Force Sexual Assault Response and Prevention Office (SARP), and Mothers Against Drunk Driving Victim Services (MADD) just to name a few. Some of my favorite work, however, has been at the state and local level serving crime victims and their families by helping them maneuver the system and find the help they need.

I welcome the opportunity to share my story and message of hope and healing. I find that my story resonates with many individuals, women's groups, leadership teams, law enforcement, and civic groups alike. This year has brought about many new challenges, and I believe this time in history has been a defining moment for us all. The inspiration I receive from sharing with others allows me to deeply empathize, connect, and support the victims and those who care for them in light of the unique experiences they share.

Aside from the physical abuse, Kim experienced extreme emotional trauma that didn't stop after she escaped her captors. It has now been over 30 years since her attack and she is still dealing with legalities of the even, proving how the abduction was only the tip of the iceberg when it comes to the hurt experience from tragedies like these.

The inspiration she has become allows her to deeply empathize, connect, and support the victims in light of the unique experiences they share.

Kim Case is one of the most incredible people I have ever had the pleasure to meet. Her story is not told because of what has happened to her, but by her ability to make the world a better place because of her experiences. I have known her for several years and each time I have her present to a class or audience, they are blown away by the message, the genuine delivery, and her hopeful spirit, as she inspires us to all be better."

Educate. Encourage. Empower.

Kim is an ambassador for survivors of traumatic experiences, a resounding speaker, and a reminder of hope within this broken world. The trajectory of her life was tremendously changed when she was abducted and abused by four unknown men very early in her life. With the realization of the immense blessing it is to live to tell the tale, she has dedicated her life to supporting other victims in similar situations to her own. Her mission is to encourage those who are hurt with emotional and physical guidance through the healing process. She wants to be a voice of comfort as well as a guide towards justice for victims.
